

From Channel 7 WWSB Sarasota ABC News

They say it happened in a flash.

"It took about 30 seconds to get a lot of damage."

Residents at the Twin Shores mobile park community on Longboat Key describe Thursdays storm as downright terrifying.

"I had a pole go right through my window."

Poles down, roofs blown off.

"Over the years there has been two times where a storm like this has blown in"

But that was three days ago, now the sun shines and the only reminder of what mother nature blew in is a little bit of caution tape and a hole in the ground where a car port once stood.

"It was really mess."

Residents thank the Red Cross, local emergency crews, and members of Calvary church in Sarasota for stepping in so quickly.

"They didn't leave until they had everything cleaned up."

They say without them, the place they call home would still be a mess.

"I think there are people in this world who ought to be complimented."

With the cleanup complete, residents can enjoy the number one reason they live on the beach.
